Distinctive Features
1	The only undergraduate course in the UK to offer the study of communication design and creative direction within a specialist fashion college. Students have the opportunity to focus in an area of communication design for fashion including image making, editorial design, digital design and experiential design, whilst maintaining a broad skill set across media.
2	Students learn about and experience all levels of the design hierarchy from designer through to art director and creative director. They are able to reconcile creative thinking with logistical and practical considerations of resources necessary at the managerial level.
3	The staff team come from a wide range of backgrounds within and outside of fashion including publishing, curation, and visual art. The curriculum is research-driven and supported by current staff interests in digital and visual culture, new technologies, media affect and phenomenology. Staff backgrounds and interests directly inform the nature of project briefs.
4	Students are taught alongside peers on other courses in the Fashion Communication programme at three strategic points in the course and throughout all years. Likewise, technical instruction is delivered centrally via a sign-up system, allowing students to learn what and when they want alongside students from a wide range of courses.
5	The course has strong links with industry, largely as a result of staff member's contacts and relationships with brands and cultural institutions. This results in regular access to industry-sponsored projects and live briefs that increase students' employability and professional literacy.

Course Detail

Introduction

BA (Hons) Creative Direction for Fashion focusses on concept generation and ideation, iterative design and proposing ideas that are globally informed and future focussed.

What to expect

- Using the skills of communication design, interface design, art direction and speculative design, students will be equipped to identify, anticipate and respond to communication opportunities as strategic thinkers and skilled communicators for our ever-changing communication landscape.
- This unique course gives students the opportunity to engage with emerging digital technologies and identify innovative opportunities for how they can be used within the fashion media and communication industry.

Work experience and opportunities

Students' are supported by industry briefs and collaborations throughout their studies. Recent collaborations have involved H&M, Knomi and the Victoria and Albert Museum. We offer regular guest lectures and master classes with visiting practitioners. Recent visitors have included Jamie Reid, Art Director of Dazed Magazine and Matthew Drinkwater from the Fashion Innovation Agency. Students will be given the opportunity to undertake a short work experience placement during their second year of study. This provides increased industry awareness as well as crucial experience and valuable contacts within the industry.
