Course Detail

Introduction

BA (Hons) Hair and Make-up for Fashion nurtures students in research, design, concept development and technical capability.

The course works closely with complementary courses: Fashion Photography, Fashion Styling and Production, and Fashion Imaging and Illustration. This means that every student can learn the skills of relevant disciplines. The importance of teamwork will be explored through collaborative projects but students will also work independently to develop key skills and personal style in preparation for the industry.

Students acquire the practical skills of make-up and hair design, together with broader academic studies which give a contemporary and historical understanding of the creative disciplines within the wider perspectives of fashion, society and the environment. This will integrate the practical and theoretical aspects of students' learning. Students also learn research skills which will underpin innovative creative practice and develop valuable analytical skills and critical awareness.

What to expect

- Technical workshops on the specialisms of hair and make-up.
- Creative masterclasses.
- Class room sessions: lectures, presentations, seminars and critiques.

- Individual and group tutorials.
- Collaborative projects: teamwork with Fashion Styling and Production, Fashion Photography and Fashion Imaging and Illustration.
- Opportunities for work experience, internships and regular industry call outs for collaboration.
- Cultural and historical academic learning and writing.
- Access to library resources and Academic Support.

Work experience and opportunities

Students will be given the opportunity to undertake a short work experience placement during their second year of study. This provides increased industry awareness as well as crucial experience and valuable contacts within the industry. Contact with the industry throughout the course increases opportunities for employment after graduation, as does the opportunity to attend workshops to hone diverse skills in preparing for employment. The course's vocational focus is supported by group work and industry practitioners simulating real-life working environments whilst providing networking opportunities for students.
